Condé Nast names Brittany Wells as new Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer

—NEW YORK, N.Y.—

Condé Nast is proud to announce that Brittany Wells, 37, will be joining the ranks as our new Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer. This position has been newly created in the hopes of furthering our company's Diversity and Inclusion impact on today's world. With the help of our Chief Officer and many other important employees on our global employee council for Diversity and Inclusion, Condé Nast hopes to help better the world around us and provide a space for diverse minds to speak their beliefs and influence our world.

Brittany Wells has long been an advocate for Diversity and Inclusion, holding positions at top companies like PBS, Warner Brothers Inc., and Hearst Corp., where she stood as Senior Director of Diversity, VP of Inclusion, and Head of HR. As of now she is the Chair of the National Congress of Black Women, Inc. and a member of the President's Diversity and Inclusion Commission. As a Berkeley graduate, Wells worked to expand her knowledge and earned her MBA in Human Resource Management from Harvard. She has long been in the industry of Diversity and Inclusion, and now is her time to shine. If the past few years have taught us anything, it is that we need more people like Wells leading the Diversity and Inclusion initiatives of companies worldwide. Wells has said, "I see myself making major strides for Condé Nast as an ally and change-maker to the inequalities in today's world, I take my position very seriously and want to work to better the global media community and begin reaching out to those who have been ignored by the spotlight of freedom and justice."

CEO, Roger Lynch, had this to say about our new hire, "Brittany Wells has shown great capacity for the role she is about to take on, I trust that with her in our ranks, Condé Nast will work towards the change we all wish to see in the world." At Condé Nast, we believe that change is necessary for progression, and as one of the top media companies in the world, we know that it is our job to fight for change through every platform possible. We hope to make waves of change through our new positions under Well's role of Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer.
